POLITICAL HYSTERIA.

an in a Recent Convention. I'm glad fate took me to a convention which never had a parallel, and probably will stand alone in history as the climax of political hysteria-all on account of a pretty woman and a white umbrella! There's no doubt about it.

The Remarkable Part Played by a Wom-

Men are creatures of sentiment. The proper time to have cheered for Blame was after the nominating speech of Senator Wolcott, whose rich voice rang out as did no other, though all the colored speakers had clear, musical voices. Colorado's junior senator looked well, dressed well, spoke well and was personally a favorite. When he sat down the applause that followed was the genuine expression of the Blainiacs and lasted but a short time. Its comparative brevity surprised me, and indicated what I had been told by a journalist early in the morning, that President Harrison would be nominated on the first bullot. Then William Henry Eustis seconded the nomination in an address which rivaled the platform in the variety of subjects introduced. Applause was about to die at the end of two minutes when a lady back of the platform, and just above ex-Speaker Reed, waved a beautiful silk flag evidently prepared for the occasion. Still another flag appeared in the same quarter, waved by another woman. The sight fired men who otherwise would have been quiet. Cheer followed cheer. If ever a human being was obsessed it was the pretty young woman in white, who between those waving flags stood on her chair, opened her white umbrella and swung it to and fro with a persistency which no one in her senses could have endured. There was hysteria in arm and face.

"Who is it?" "Will she never sit down?" "What's the matter with her?" "If she doesn't stop soon she'll be the death of me!" were several of countless exclamations. The umbrella was with drawn, but the mission of the woman in white had not ceased. The umbrella was replaced by a tricolored star with James G. Blaine's portrait in the middle To and fro the woman in white waved it, and the cheering redoubled in volume

"To the platform!" cried some. The obsessed woman moved down with her star and had almost reached the platform, when her husband, a journalist stopped her in her mad career and led her back to her seat. Mounted on a broom the star was still waved to and fro until at the end of twenty-four minutes the woman in white succumbed to nature and the reign of hysteria wa-

Delegates had taken little part in this demonstration. Harrisonians sat silent and grim, unmoved by the vagaries of a hypnotized woman. Sound and fury signified nothing to them. The curious spectacle did not change one vote. The man from Maine had already been sac rificed by political exigencies.-Kate Field's Washington.

An Idea for Senting Guests. At a pretty dinner given recently the guests, numbering forty, were seated eight each, at five round tables. Each table was decorated with one variety of flower, and on arriving each guest was presented with a small bouquet of the flowers corresponding to those on the table at which he was to find his place The table where the host and hostess were seated was placed at such an angle as to command a view of the company by one or the other of them.

This keeping in touch with the gueste is a difficulty encountered by all givers of large dinners. In this regard a New York woman not long ago quite overreached herself. So puzzled was she at which table to sit herself that she finally gut the Gordian knot by dining alone at a small table placed in the center of her guests. As one of the guests said, "It was too deliciously funny to resent, and the smile which I could not repress saw reflected from most of the other faces of the company about me."-Her Point of View in New York Times.

Shell Coverings for Diamonds, Surprising it is that shells or little coverings for diamond earrings are not more worn in this country. The safest place to carry the precious gems is in the ears but during the day, particularly in the morning, these little shells either in black or subdued colors, look well. They conceal the brilliancy of the diamonds, that should really be shown only when a lady is in full dress or very elegantly attired. One could go shopping, etc., and these modest shell earrings would attract no attention whatever .- New York Journal.

Mrs. Langtry Out Driving. Mrs. Langtry drives every morning in the park, drawn by a big dark chestnut which is quite a picture of what a single harness carriage horse ought to be. She est of livery, and her usual companion is a black poodle, shaved in the orthodox way, and having his forelock tied with pale blue ribbon. This goes well with his mistress' dark blue foulard gown printed with yellow, and her chip hat, black underneath and straw color at the top, is trimined with pink roses.—London Star.

A New Way to Catch Flah. Mr. David Pickle, of the Cuba district, Blakely, Ga., has a new mode of catching fish. The plan is this: The fish are baited for some days with a mixture of into stiff paste or dough. When they begin to take the bait a magnetized iron or steel rod, coated with the same kind of paste, is let down to them. They soon attempt to suck the paste from it, and in doing so stick hard and fast. It is not unusual for Mr. Pickle to haul out at one time a long string or rod of suckers in this way. This plan of fishing, combined with Mr. Cal Odom's method of frightening or setting fire to the fur of raccoons and burning them out of the highest trees with roman candles, is bound to revolutionize hunting and fishing in this section.—Atlanta Constitution.

duct with regard to picnics which it is well to observe. For one thing, never except that it is the other way aroundthe hard work comes before the fun in stead of after it. When a pionic is over and most of the things are eaten up it and many of those taken in to-day have a gether and carry them away. But the getting of them there is terrible. So it is a point of reasonable conduct to come a little late.

> Another point is to decline nothing that offers in the way of food. Don't refuse rolls on the expectation of getting sandwiches, because you may not get the sandwiches. Keep the rolls; you needn't eat them if you get the sandwiches. Another point-avoid conflicting contusions upon your next neighbor by grabbing wildly at the olive dish. If you do thus grab for it he is likely to do the same thing at the same moment Cruel bodily injuries have resulted from this course of action. The danger arises from the fact that olives are the staff of life at picnics. Gentlemen in waiting upon ladies should occasionally furtively bolt a sandwich as a matter of prevision, since the estables may all be consumed or the inevitable rainstorm come up before the ladies are fully waited upon. Any one can get through a picnic day safely and comfortably without ice cream, macaroons, frosted cake or other delicacies, but sustenance of some sort he must have. TRADE STATISTICS AND WHAT THEY SHOW.

A Concise Statement of Financial Facts EDITCE COURNAL:-The Bureau of Statis ties of the Treasury Department has just completed its compilation of the foreign trade of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892. It shows an apparent balance of trade in our favor of $202,944,341. At first sight this appears to be a very healthy showing, but let us look a little further and try and discover how this balance of trade has been settled. A great many people cannot see why it is that we continue to export gold when the balance of trade is two hundred million dollars in our favor. If they understood the financial situation the cause would be very plain. To put the case in a nutshell, the European money kings have more than five billion dollars invested in securities and properties located in the United States, The five billion dol'ars is supposed to be earning an average rate of interest of five per cent. In round numbers the yearly interest amounts to two hundred and filty million dollars. This year, owing to the tightness of the money markets of Europe caused by an enormous over-supply of bonds and mortgages, the money kings of Europe, in place of reinvesting the interest collecting the interest, and that is why our gold is going to Europe. With normal trade conditions it would take two or three years for Europe to absorb all our gold in settlement of the interest account. The goldbug idea of getting this gold back is to buy it with more bonds. This, to some people, is getting monotonous. Two Brooklyn Boys.

Two boys living in Brooklyn recently wrote to Secretary Tracy of the navy, telling of a scheme they had on hand. Part of their letter is given as follows: "We intend to make an expedition to the north pole, We believe that we will be successful if we are supplied with the following articles: A good supply of coal, food, clothing, and carpenters', machinists' and engineers' tools. We would also like to have a mortar, many bombs, weapons of all kinds and plenty of ammunition. We would like to have two ships like either the Maine, Texas or Baltimore."

They had various other ideas in connection with the plan, which they explained to the secretary, but the government will not be able to attend to the matter at present. There is plenty of time, however, for the scheme to be considered, as the boys do not intend to go until they have come of age, and the eldest of the two is now only thirteen .-Harper's Young People.

Shetland Ponies.

The smallest pony in the world is to be found at the well known Shetland pony farm of the Marquis of Londonderry, on the island of Bressay. It is a little colt foal that weighed but sixteen pounds and was only nineteen and a half inches high at its birth. It is a perfectly healthy, well formed animal. The great object of the breeders of Shetland ponies is to keep down the size of the animals. The price increases in inverse ratio to size. This is partly from fancy and fashion, and partly because the smaller the ponies the better fitted for working in the seams of coal in the mines where they find their chief usefulness.-New York Sun.

Good Manners of Little Helpers. "Father, you are tired. I'll run up stairs for that coat you want." "Here's The Companion, Jack. I know you are dying to read the rest of that continued story, so I'll wait, though it is my turn this week to have the paper first." "Help you stem the cherries, motherie? Why, of course I will. This letter can keep until afterward easily enough." Chance phrases, these, from the home language of good manners!—M. D. Sterling in Good Housekeeping.

A Very Polite Little Boy. He was a very polite, nice little boy, and he had always been taught not to make derogatory remarks on his food. His politeness was sorely tried one day when they had a most especially tough chicken for dinner. He patiently struggled with an unconquerable drumstick for five minutes or so, and then he looked up and said in a mild and polite little voice, "Papa, I think whoever made this chicken made him very well." -Boston Commonwealth.

Little Edith and the Chickens. Little Edith, not yet two years old, was fond of trying to button mamma's shoes. One day the chickens were too friendly and mamma cried: "Shoo, chicky! Shoo!" Little Edith caught up the buttonhook and ran after them, saying, "Button my schicky's shoe!"-Youth's Companion.

A Cradle Made by the Blind. Queen Victoria is a firm believer in the old superstition that anything made by a blind person is sure to bring good luck, and has had the cradle for the latest Battenberg baby made and furnished throughout in the most elegant manner by blind men and women.-

My Dolly went to the Fourth of July— I never should have allowed her— We both were careless, Dolly and I, And came too close to the powder I don't know how it happened myself—
"I was something about the fuses—
But Dolly and I were laid on the shelf
With blisters and bumps and bruises.

I wasn't hurt very much, you know,
Tho' mamma declared it shocked her;
My troubles were cured long, long ago
Without once calling the dector;
But Della will reverse. Without once calling the dieler,
But Dolly will never again be fair
But Dolly will never again be fair
And it frizzled and singed her golden hair
Till she's balder than Uncle Potter.

The leading crews came in for a hearty reception, while the final scene, when all the crews with uplifted oars cheered one another in turn, was particularly striking. The success of the afternoon, however, was the Lady Margaret boat, which contained two men and six empty seats, to which were affixed sticks with placards bearing the legend "Sept Down," while another notice stated that further particulars might be obtained of Messrs.

Caldecott and Cox. The Johnsans had celebrated their bumps with such vigor that nine out of the sixteen men in the two boats had peen sent down. It certainly seems a very strong step, and it is unfortunate that it should have had to be taken.— Cor. Pall Mall Gazette.

Among the objects obtained by Mr. Talcott Williams in Morocco for the Smithsonian institution were five sheets of extremely rare Berber manuscript, made probably in the Thirteenth centuv: a botanical collection of about 800 lants, a valuable collection of ethnographic material, villagers' costumes of men and women, representing both the Berber and mountain villages, and a collection of pottery made with the special design of illustrating all the wares in ordinary use between Tetuan and
